

Day 5 of the Albury Odyssey.

The group almost departed on time at 9:10 am from the Atura car park and headed to the Hume Dam, pausing to admire the full dam and shooting water generating power.

We then followed a diversion from the original route, via the bridge from NSW over the Murray, to visit Bethanga (Victoria) and enjoy a coffee break at the post office, recently converted to include a cafe/shop.

Those who followed instructions from Mark then went across the Bethanga Bridge and travelled right around Lake Hume past Hotel Granya and stopped at Tallangatta for lunch, either with food brought along, pies or sandwiches from the local bakery or a huge meal at the Tallangatta hotel.

Service was slow and we caught up with a few locals who had died waiting for their food.

Those who didn't follow the instructions ended up going in circles, then giving up and heading directly to Tallangatta. Some of us meanwhile visited the local museum with lots of great models and photos on hand!

After lunch we took a short drive to visit Bonegilla Migrant Experience and enjoyed a guided tour from Alice, our knowledgeable guide....a very informative tour indeed about our early immigrants from 1947.

From there some of us motored to Monument Hill where we “enjoyed” the view over Albury even though it was blocked by overgrown trees. Next stop home
Once again a long, enjoyable and informative day!
